PURE FOOD

An order-in-council was recently passed at Ottawa, calling for the enforcement of the pure food act. This has been found necessary on account of so much filth and adulteration in pretty well every article of food stuff. The other day a citizen of Calgary brought a quart bottle in which his domestic supply of milk had just been delivered. The bottle had certainly not been cleaned before the milk was placed in it, in addition, contained two dead flies, and the milk was full of sediment. No wonder typhoid fever is prevalent in that city when such filth is being purveyed for use. Unfortunately milk is not the only thing by any means that is adulterated; the following article written by C. G. Garland in the Calgary News-Telegram is common sense and worth reading:

"Pure food, pure water, pure air is the slogan of the up-to-date twentieth century sanitation expert. Providence provided pure water and pure air and left no excuse for the pollution of water, air or food. The combined greed, laziness, ignorance and meanness of man has been the cause of the offences which have produced so much waste by disease, sickness and unsanitary methods, that culminate eventually in death. It, therefore, behoves each and every individual to demand above every thing else unadulterated foods. Know for yourself. Make it your business to find out—as you have a just right to do—what you are eating and what you are drinking. How about the young and tender children? More especially should we take them into vital consideration—they are growing and need good, wholesome and pure food. You, as parents, want robust, strong, healthy children. They need it for their growth, development and for their school work. Every time you give them a drink of milk or a piece of bread or sweets—in fact, anything that you use or need in the house—ask from your dealer that just what it contains, it will not be many moons until you get the right kind of a deal."

A TIP TO PRISONERS.

The tactics of the militant suffragettes in England have again got one over the British Government. The "hunger strike" has again brought about the release on parole from jail of another militant suffragette, in the person of Gladys Evans, who was sentenced on August 7th, on the charge of setting fire to the Theatre Royal at Dublin the day Premier Asquith was to speak in the theatre on home rule. The government having now set precedents by releasing these titled, it will be in order for all other convicts to inaugurate the "hunger strike" in Great Britain's prisons, and, lo, presto, the prison doors will be opened for their release. Or will it be one law for the rich and another for the poor?

THE HOME TRAINING

It has been proven over and over again, that the example of father and mother in the home has a great deal to do with the after-life of the boys and girls of the home. One of the greatest ambitions of the boy is to be able to do and say the things that father does—to his young mind the greatest things and the most sayings on earth—whether good or bad. Unconsciously to either father or mother the boy and girl is constantly drinking in and absorbing the influences of their home-life, which, in the majority of cases, has its after-effects all through the lives of the children. If parents could only realize the great and ever-increasing responsibility their home-life had on the future of their sons and daughters, how different would they act and how much more particular would they be in what they said before their children, and also the training of the children. It does not always follow, however, that every boy and girl coming from good homes turn out paragons of perfection; but good home influences goes a mighty long way in moulding their characters to become true men and women, and more able to withstand the temptations and escape the pit-falls that beset them as they go out into the world.

In a letter written to the Toronto (Ont.) Globe, a correspondent asks: "Are the ladies of Toronto, the mothers and sisters of these boys, responsible for this? Of recent years the number of invitations received by ladies in functions where cards are not played is almost a negligible quantity. You hear of them playing in the afternoon with blinds down and electric lights blazing, and you hear of them, and can verify the truth of it from personal knowledge, playing bridge—for prizes, which is only another form of gambling—on a bright, sunshiny August afternoon on a back veranda, and giving glowing reports afterwards of how beautiful the flowers were and what a wonderful garden it was, etc. How edifying to the children of those ladies! What wonder that the seed that has been sown in this way for the last ten years is bearing fruit, and the boys are growing up with the gambling instinct and the love of success in games of pure chance planted in their bosoms by the last ones of all who should be guilty of such an act—their mothers and sisters. Can it be supposed for one moment that when youngsters see their mothers leaving right after lunch to attend an afternoon bridge they are going to grow up with any but friendly feelings towards a pack of cards?"

Most unpalatable truth is contained in this correspondent's statement. The bridge game on the veranda and carried home in triumph may inspire the bridge player's boy to get something for nothing in a game of chance, and the end may be the filling of another cell in one of the penitentiaries. The evil is not in the pack of cards or the horse-racing, it is in the risking of money "on the chance" of making more easily and quickly. The habit of playing for stakes is a dangerous habit and subversive of good morals.

Happy is the home in which there is no room for doubt.

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Nearly every woman will read with interest the letter of Mrs. Geo. Bradshaw, quoted below. It tells of years of great suffering from Nervous Headaches and other symptoms arising from weak, watery blood and a starved and exhausted condition of the nervous system.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Coxy Nook, Harlow, Ont., writes—"I am glad to state that I received benefits from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food which I failed to get any place else. I was troubled for many years, in fact from my early womanhood, with weak, watery blood, and given to drowsy, I suffered until agonies from my own sick headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, in fact I was so disabled for many years. I tried many kinds of patent medicines, and got no help, and tried every new doctor that came along, but all failed to help me. Doctors told me I had no blood, and that my heart and kidneys were diseased, and that I had so many complaints there was not much use in doctoring up one or two. Four years ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and was glad to see I felt better, and then got on more, and they cured me of many of my complaints. I am now taking Nerve Food I weighed 115 pounds, and today I weigh 139, and am 55 years old.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, etc., a box, 6 for $2.50 at all druggists or Johnsen, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Officer (nearly apoplectic)—Oh don't know, yer honor, but I think it's straight whisky—Judge.

Guarding a Royal Train

Few people know that the passage of a Royal Train is guarded almost every yard of the way by the Sovereign's royal guard.

Many people laugh when they read of lines upon lines of soldiers drawn up along the railway tracks in the parks where the Royal family travel, but the same thing practically occurs in Russia and only without the ostentatious display of uniforms. The liner which the Royal train is to pass is guarded as effectively guarded, though to all appearance there is nobody there.

A German merchant, resident in Moscow, has left all his fortune, amounting to half a million, to all of his employees who have served under him for five years or more. Their portions are to be received on the basis of the first annual wage multiplied by the number of years they have been in his service. Those who have worked for the firm less than five years receive a joint sum of $50,000, which is to be divided according to wages and seniority. The staff have decided to organize the business and to bring them to a joint stock company.

Mrs. Kadon—Isn't that a delightful shortcake, Henry?

Henry—I'll consider it innocent until it's proven guilty.

Schooling An Athlete

For the fifth year in succession a Rotherham girl has won the sports championship of the London County School in South London.

Nellie Stockwell, 13 and the daughter of the keeper of the Rotherham mortuary, has won the trophy was the championship medal for the school athletic meeting, where she was first in six events and won in four others.

She won the championship first when she was nine, and has secured it every year since, although the girl competitors have numbered more than 1,700 each time.

I don't train in any special way, says. My father gives me plenty of meat, and I have regular exercise.

Besides her sports trophies, Nellie has a first-class swimming certificate, and until recently she was the best swimmer of her school. Also she has won five medals for her good conduct and attendance.

Up to now she has captured thirty-one prizes of different kinds.

A Grim Preview

A curious occupation has sprung up in Paris. Several doctors have received a tremor from a new-fangled agency, which offers to find patients for them. The fees are rather high. They vary from $25 to $100.

On receipt of the fee the doctor is secured a list of 20 commensurate, 20 applicants, 20 people suffering from cancer and so forth. He is then at liberty to call and offer his services. The agency's circular declares that the lists of patients are compiled from absolutely certain sources and that the money will be returned if there are more than three mistakes in each list. This is rather a grim prospect.

A Remarkable Dog

A dog which had, during nine years of its life, collected upwards of 15,000 coins under remarkable conditions, died on Saturday at Reading. The money had been devoted to local charities. The dog never carried a box, but begged for a coin. For a half-penny the dog demanded a biscuit as a condition of releasing the coin, and biscuits were required in exchange to a penny or two coins. In all, the dog had earned 18,000 biscuits in its philanthropic collecting.

Collins's Nimble Wit

While the king was looking at a pony which had been brought up for his inspection, the pony proved somewhat restless.

"Direct the daylight worries him, said the king.

"No, replied the minister, it is the headstall, he doesn't like. He can't see your majesty plain enough."

—London Spectator.

Anxious to Know

Officer, she said, bawling to the policeman, that person has been following me for an hour.

No, but I wish you would cut out whether he thinks I'm beautiful or not.

Just running around after me because I wear a pauper skirt and carry a cane. —The Birmingham Age-Herald.

Science to Imitate Nature

The view has been advanced in more than a quarter that during the next two or three centuries inventors probably will be in the direction of imitating the wonderful economy and the simple, direct methods of Nature.

An instance in point is the electric organ. Its electric organ is in no sense a storage battery, but a contrivance by which electric energy is liberated at the moment when it is required. The electric organ shows a small electric force that a galvanometer is needed to detect it, but a sudden nervous impulse from the spinal cord raises a potential of many volts with very little heat and so small an expenditure of matter as to defy the most expert chemist to weigh it. Fireflies, glow worms, and many deep sea fishes produce light, without heat at a cost which would make a most extravagant outlay.—Harper's Weekly.

Great Discovery

I tell you to live in an age of progress.

How now?

Now every sharp has discovered that you can shake down off a dog with a human cleaner.—Kansas City Journal.

One Charitable Act

Hubby—Well, I did one charitable act.

Wife—No, no glad, dear. Tell me all about it.

Hubby—Oh, there isn't much to tell. One of my clerks asked for an increase in salary so that he could get married and I refused to give it to him.

Women are inconsistent, always. What is the matter now?

That girl is supposed to be fastidious about me a lot of her property, and now she has attacked it in a breach of promise action.

Evidence of Experience

What makes you think that man has had experience with sailboats?

He doesn't show any inclination to get into any of them.—Washington Star.

As in a Mirror

Strange at the door—I am trying to find a lady whose name I have forgotten, but I know she lives in this neighborhood. She is a singularly beautiful creature, with pink and white complexion, sea-blue eyes, lovely eyes, and hair such as a goddess might have. —Londoner.

Servant—Really, sir, I don't know.

Voice (from head of stairs)—Jane told the gentleman I'll be down in a minute.

He-If I should like you, what would happen?

She—Then I should like you, what would happen?

He—Then I won't do it.

She—But fathers in Europe.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Wife—You extravagance is awful.

When I do you'll probably hear how my practice.—Londoner.

Wife—Well, I should be better off than some poor women who never had any practice.—Londoner.

That New Hat

The young wife, refused a new hat, bitterly complained that she had a lot to put up with.

Yes, replied her husband, and if you ever have a new hat to put up with, you would not ask me to put up for a new hat.

In the Court

Lawyer—You claim to be a professor. What is your degree and where did you get it?

Witness—The only degree I ever got was the third degree, and the police gave it to me.

The most densely populated of all countries of the world is Belgium, with 624 inhabitants to the square mile.
